Globalisation poses a number of complex and inter-related questions for Christian mission. Concern for the environment, the rise of secularism, changing social attitudes among the young and the increasingly plural nature of societies in terms of both culture and religion are all global issues, but they have unique resonance in the contemporary context of Australia and the Pacific. This calls for new responses in leadership and education for mission within our Christian Churches. This conference will not only pose the questions raised by our contemporary context but will seek to provide a positive forum for addressing their many challenges.
